

One teaspoon of soil contains more organisms than there are people on Earth.

One teaspoon of soil contains several thousand different species, two hundred metres of fungi, and a billion bacterial cells.

