Take Action: Using research to suggest actions

Brainstorm ideas about what actions could be taken to address the topic you researched about homelessness – no idea is too big or small! Reflect on the new knowledge gained from your research and the resources you looked at.

Reflection

To finish the unit, answer the following questions to consolidate key ideas from the film and your research, and to reflect on your perceptions of homelessness:

- How has your understanding of homelessness and those who experience homelessness evolved throughout this unit of learning?
- Reflecting on your research, what was the most surprising or impactful finding you uncovered?
- In what ways do you think your actions, both individually and collectively, can contribute to addressing homelessness in your community?
- How can we continue to raise awareness and foster compassion for individuals experiencing homelessness beyond the classroom?
