

A Turtle's life

(Text extract from the clip - A turtle's life).

Inside a little egg all safe and warm a creature waits to transform.

Scurrying across the sand the turtle can't wait to reach the sea.

Wanting to see what all the fuss is about.

Swimming in the ocean waves, yippee.

This turtle is one of the lucky ones.

Even those that are strong struggle to survive.

Fishnets, cast into the sea, trap nearby turtles.

Plastic bags and burst balloons, floating rubbish look like jellyfish.

Turtles mistake the floating rubbish for their favourite dish.

The ocean has been polluted changing habitats below.

Turtles have no power to stop this, on and on they must go.

The time has come for the turtle to join the great turtle migration.

Returning to their birthplace laying the next generation.

The hatchlings life will be different.

Will it be better or worse?

We will have to wait to see what comes.

Crawling up the shore, plastic all around.

'I don't want my babies here on this unsafe, unclean ground.

One hundred million years we've lived but they are endangered now.

I must find help to protect my species.

If only I knew how?

Can you help me?
